DOROTHY DIX Financial Tyrant

Dear Miss Dix: My son is soon to marry a splendid girl, sensible, conservative and one who spends the money she makes wisely, for she has a good job in fact, earns more than my son does. Nevertheless, he announced to us that when he is married he is going to do all the buying, even of the food and that whenever his wife wants a dollar she will have to come and ask him for it and tell him just exactly what she is going to use it for.

I can see nothing but disaster in a marriage run on this plan. My son says that he does not intend to tell the wife of the way to the bank to get money, but that he will let her run his home until after they are married. What can we do about it?

R. C.

Answer: Divorces are messy things to have in a family. They cost a lot in suffering and money, and it is your duty to try to save both your son and the girl from this unhappy experience by warning her before she marries him of how he intends to conduct the home finances. For divorce there will be if he tries to put his penny-pinching plan in operation.

Behind The Times

Your son must be fifty years behind the times if he does not realize that he cannot put any such deal as he is contemplating over on a wife now. Anyway, what is the idea of your son marrying the girl whom he thinks so poorly that he does not believe her to have intelligence enough to even buy the groceries or house furniture to be invested with a few dollars? Apparently he doesn't want a wife.

He just wants an unpaid servant who will wash and scrub and cook and mend for him without having to be paid.

If that is his notion, he had better ask himself why any woman would do it, what any woman would get out of such an arrangement of why any woman would be fool enough to sink in such an unending bargain after she found out and kept trapped all morning. Why would any woman work twice as hard in a kitchen as she did in an office when she would get well paid for one and nothing but insults for the other?

Any woman who marries a man who is a self-declared underachiever has my profound sympathy, and I don't blame her for trying a trick or two.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am free, but not happy and worried, and I don't know what to do. I am married to a man who is a self-declared underachiever and I don't know what to do. I am married to a man who is a self-declared underachiever and I don't know what to do.

Country Clubs to Observe UN Day

The UN flag will fly in most of the communities in Hempstead county on United Nations Day, Oct.

over 24, according to reports made to Home Demonstration Agent Lorraine Blackwood. As all home demonstration agents in Arkansas, Mrs. Blackwood is prepared to furnish information and instruction on flag making to all groups.

The flag-making plan is sponsored by the National Citizens' Committee for United Nations Day, and it has been endorsed by farm organizations and by labor, retail and industrial, veteran, religious, education and other groups.

The Extension Service of the United States Department of Agriculture is leading the program for groups in the counties by making information and demonstrations available through the county home demonstration agents and the Extension offices, Mrs. Blackwood explained.

All organizations are encouraged to make UN flags for a special celebration of the fifth anniversary of the United Nations. These ceremonies and the flags are symbols of the 50 member nations are using to designate "There shall be peace."

Kits for making the flags may be obtained at a cost of 50 cents from The National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, 39 East Van Buren Street, Chicago, Ill. Complete information on use of the materials may be obtained from the Extension office.

Special flag etiquette for use of the UN flag as prescribed by the UN for the use of the UN flag provides that it should be flown or displayed in our country with the United States flag; (2) both the UN flag and the U.S. flag should be flown or displayed at the same height; (3) both the UN flag and the U.S. flag should be approximately equal in size. It has been customary to place the UN and U.S. flags to the right of the speaker on the rostrum, the right of the speaker in a parade.

Further details for flying the U.S. flag can be found in Public Law 329.

passed by the 77th Congress, and approved December 22, 1942.

It is hoped that flags will be made for display in all schools and other public places on United Nations Day, she stated. The purpose for making the UN flags which are applied design in white on blue background are three fold: (1) to emphasize the high hope for peace for which the UN flag stands, and make people in every community familiar with the flag; (2) to provide a means for women and girls to express in a tangible way their patriotic desire to serve the UN and U.S. effort for world peace; (3) to encourage better and more unified understanding by local groups and individuals of the UN as an instrument through which free people may jointly express their determination to remain free.

All Home Demonstration Clubs, PTA, VFW, and other civic organizations are cooperating in the flag making program. Any organization or group interested in making UN flags are asked to contact Mrs. Blackwood at the County Extension Office or call 68.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 9 — P — A posse scoured dense wilderness near here today for a 15-year-old high school boy who Sheriff's deputies say, shot down two young girls.

He disappeared among the trees after the shooting carrying a .22 caliber rifle.

The victims, Myrna Benson, 12, and Pauline Parady, 14, both of Sault Ste. Marie, were spending a weekend with Myrna's parents at a cabin on the shore of Lake Superior when rifle shots felled them Saturday on a lonely road near here.

Records Fall in Weekend Grid Play

By WILL GRIMSLEY

New York, Oct. 9 — (AP) — Modest football's longest unbeaten streak lay in shambles today and a disaster loomed immediately ahead for the two records that were closest to matching it. Stanford at 39 games was Super Dancer's four-year unbeaten career — cracked by a Purdue team that fashioned a shocking 27-0 upset Saturday at South Bend.

That left Army and Oklahoma to carry on success streaks already past the 29 mark, but both of them face a possible scissoring job next Saturday.

West Point, unlicked in 22 games, will oppose formidable Michigan in New York's Yankee stadium in the game of the day.

Oklahoma's Sooners will risk their 21 consecutive victories against powerful, unbeaten Texas at Dallas Cotton Bowl.

Contests for both Michigan and Texas will not create too great a surprise. They could do it.

The Wolverines from Ann Arbor, cracksmen of the Big Ten, will defeat Michigan State in the opening game but bounded back last Saturday to whip Dartmouth.

Army, meanwhile, set down Penn State emphatically on Bob Bald's passing, 41-7.

The young season already has produced a brush disregard for the college sport's hierarchy.

The two top-ranking teams were given a rude bumping last weekend while two powers barely touched with skin intact.

Michigan State, given No. 2 rating behind Notre Dame after its mauling of Michigan, fell before Maryland 34-7, Washington, No. 10, barely nipped out UCLA, 14-13.

Michigan State's opponent Saturday, William and Mary, and Stanford upset victim. The Bruins were whipped, 47-0, by Wake Forest in Dixie's major surprise.

The other "top ten" teams came through without hardship. Southwestern Methodist, No. 3, just above Army and Oklahoma, turned Kyle Keady, No. 6, racked up its fourth straight shutout over harmless Dayton, 40-0.

Stanford, No. 8, crushed Oregon State, 21-0, while California turned back Penn, 14-7.

These sources, who cannot be quoted by name, said Mr. Truman has definitely abandoned any thought of an extensive "whistle-stop" political campaign. He had contemplated such a stumping tour before the Reds invaded South Korea and made inappropriate a direct new appeal in behalf of the "fair deal."

A White House announcement on the New York speech — Oct. 24 — will await a formal invitation from the United Nations. The occasion is the fifth anniversary of the date when the United Nations charter became effective.

The president, fresh from a week's rest aboard the yacht, Williamsburg in Chesapeake Bay, and Philippine waters, may decide this week what other talks he will make.

At the time Mr. Truman had planned a campaign in practical, every region, but this assignment has now been taken over by Vice President Barkley.

However, Mr. Truman is understood to have told Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle, Jr., he will be available for whatever speaking chores Boyle may have available.

Boyle has said recently that he expects Mr. Truman to make at least one nationwide radio broadcast in behalf of Democratic candidates. Boyle's executive vice chairman, Senator Anderson of New York, said he will urge the president to make several frank radio addresses.

Within seven additional talks are planned in Washington or elsewhere. Key cities will be visited frequently.

Mr. Truman's aides said today there is no present indication that the president will do much more than make whatever talks he may be asked to make for votes and support in the campaign dedicated to sustaining the United Nations.

Harvard University faculty will exhibit a new polio respirator for treatment of the disease.

Dr. L. B. Biggs, Gen. James S. Hays and Dr. Stanley J. Sarant will appear before the third annual West Coast regional conference on mental health which opens Thursday.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

New York, Oct. 9 — (AP) — Caseyballers, walloped Kansas State, 31-7, the gentlemen of the press Owen to name a few will tell naturally descended upon Quarterback Don Heinrich, who completed 13 of 22 passes for 292 yards and four touchdowns. "You really think that made the Yankees," he was throwing "for today, Don." World Series victory so easy was down a few long hills that he might have meant a difference in the result. "Owen was a pioneer in using the 'cambrella' defense in football — the formation that put three or four men back to block up or intercept forward passes."

Detailed reports are lacking on the defense Purdue used to end Knickerbocker's training at Notre Dame's 39-game defeatless streak, but those three interceptions the other day when he visited nearby West Point for a game that Holcombe must have a Piebe football game and found a similar setup. But his son, Joe, Jr., starting for the who gets the last laugh? Army army kids against the Fordham quit trying to stop the Irish, Sullivan. Best World Series prediction including ours of the Yankees in four was made by Stanley Frank in "Baseball Digest."

Stan figured it an even bet that Kinds college "Wilkes-Barre, Pa." the Boston team in any game wouldn't score more than one.

Man Found Dead in Jail at Joiner

Joiner, Oct. 9 — (AP) — A man paled on a minor charge here was found dead in his cell yesterday, his body pressed against the bars in a last frantic effort to escape a pall of choking smoke.

Sheriff William Berryman identified him as James E. Prince, 29, home unknown, and said he died of suffocation caused by a mattress fire. He said he was trying to locate relatives of the victim in Jackson, Tenn.

Joiner Ed Sadler said he was unable to hear sounds from the cell, located in the basement of a concrete building. He discovered the body when he carried a tray of breakfast to the cell.

Marshal Boyce Byrd said he arrested Prince Saturday night and charged him with disturbing the peace. He said Prince was drinking in a cafe.

The marshal said Prince told him he had been working on a farm near Bassett, Ark.

Americans Are Quick to Take Action

By MAX HALL
(For James Marlow)

Washington, Oct. 8.—P—Americans just hate to stand by quietly and see things drifting from bad to worse.

If they think the country is going to hell, they do not withhold this information from their neighbors. And they write dear-sir-you-cur letters to their congressmen.

So it isn't surprising, in these uneasy times, that some Americans have an itch to take pen in hand and begin:

"Dear Joe—"
Harold E. Stassen did it last week. Henry A. Wallace did it in 1948. Since Mr. Stassen and Mr. Wallace are prominent political figures, it is possible to imagine that they had an added incentive for their letters to Joseph Stalin. But the itch is felt by obscure citizens as well.

A month ago, a woman school teacher named Icie Johnson wrote Premier Stalin from Warrensburg, Mo., asking him to help restore a permanent chance for peaceful living for all people.

And she is not alone. Every few days the state department gets a letter from some citizen who asks if it's O. K. for him, or her, to explain to Stalin what a mess he's getting the world into.

The state department discourages these earnest people and quotes the Logan act to them.

The Logan act was passed on Jan. 30, 1939, and is still on the books almost unchanged. This law prohibits any U. S. citizen, without authority of the U. S., from getting in touch with a foreign government—directly or indirectly—with intent to influence that government in relation to a dispute with the U. S.

No record exists that anyone was ever convicted of violating this law but the state department implies that there could always be a first time.

The Logan act was named after Dr. George Logan, but he was not a member of congress. Oh, my no. Here is the story:

In 1793, when John Adams was president, we came perilously close to war with France. Relations were broken off. George Washington, then 76 years old, was yanked out of retirement to command the army.

Adams sent three men to France to smooth things over. They failed. Adams' party, the Federalists, whooped it up for war. Vice-president Thomas Jefferson's party, the Republicans (not the present Republican party) was friendlier to France, and opposed war. Feelings were terribly bitter.

In the midst of all this, a wealthy, benevolent, well-meaning Quaker from Philadelphia, Dr. George Logan, decided to try for peace. He went to Paris at his own expense. The French hailed him as a dove of peace. He came happily back to the U. S. in November 1793, bearing verbal assurance that France would negotiate.

The Federalists were furious. They were convinced that Logan had been sent to France by the Republicans. Secretary of State Timothy Pickens rebuffed Logan. General Washington was curt to him.

Pickens was so angry that he induced congress to pass a law which made it illegal to guess it, the Logan act.

Ten years later, when Pickens was a senator from Massachusetts, the situation was reversed. The Republicans had come to power. We were drifting into war with England. Pickens sent messages to England in an indirect effort to persuade George Canning, the foreign secretary, to lay off America. This seems to historians to have been a clear violation of—yes, the Logan act.

Harold E. Stassen, the later-day Republican, no doubt is familiar with the George Logan story. He certainly knows all about the Logan act, for he told Stalin very clearly that he only sought world peace and was not trying to influence Russia in relation to any dispute with the U. S.

Nevertheless, if he visits Stalin, perhaps a new political slogan will

Egypt's Startling Offer Is an Attempt to Get the British Out of Her Country

By DEWITT MacKenzie
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The Egyptian United Nations delegation is reported to have put out as a feint the extraordinary proposal that their little nation contribute from one to two million men as part of an international police force.

This suggestion is premised on the idea that other U. N. members supply arms and equipment for this huge force. It also carries the conditions that Britain withdraw her troops from Egyptian territory.

Egypt would guarantee to protect not only her own strategic area but the all-important Suez canal—gateway to the East. She doesn't think this defense should be left in British hands.

This isn't the first arrow of the kind Egypt has shot into the air to see where it would land. The same idea was advanced recently in Cairo and was published in the London press. All of which, of course, gives rise to speculation as to just what is behind this strange suggestion.

First off the average observer will note that it would take a magician to raise an army of 2,000,000 from a population of 20,000,000. Even if such a force could be established, its maintenance would be too great a burden especially for a country which isn't rich.

However, assuming that a strong army could be raised and equipped in order: "George Logan rides again."

just what is it that Egypt has in mind?

One thing, of course, she makes amply clear. She wants to get rid of British influence which always has been a thorn in the flesh.

I first had personal contact with Egyptian bitterness against British domination in World War One, just after England established a protectorate over the country. I had a long audience with the late Sultan Hussein Kamil, one of Egypt's great princes who had been assigned to the rule by Britain. He didn't want the job, but felt that he might be able to help his people by taking it.

The ears of London's high commissioner in Alexandria must have burned as the Sultan poured out his feelings. He blasted the British.

The Egyptians make the argument that their troops would make the best defense for the Suez canal area because they not only would be representing the U. N., but would be defending their homeland. I'm afraid that is a specious argument which could only be true if the Egyptian army were as efficient as the British. One doubts whether Egypt can compete with England in this respect as yet.

There is another aspect of this situation which can't be overlooked. Not only is the defense of the Suez canal vital to the Western nations, but peace must be maintained in the whole highly inflammable middle Eastern zone. That is a task which Egypt could scarcely undertake alone.

However, it's easy to have a sympathetic understanding of Egypt's desire to be her own boss. Certainly she will be expected to make her contribution of a military unit to the projected U. N. force for maintenance of peace, although she is one of those not contributing to the U. N. army in South Korea. For the rest, her present army and the British should be able to work together effectively.

But the idea of an army of one or two millions would stagger much bigger countries than Egypt.

The dead were Bill Williams, 40, Carlisle; Lula Martin, 37, her six-month-old daughter, Barbara Anne, and Henry Lee Russell, 24, all of Hazen.

Mrs. Mason W. Clifton, 43, co-editor of the Brinkley Argus, was injured fatally in the collision of two automobiles near West Memphis, six others, including her husband, publisher of the paper, were injured.

Woodrow Jones, 36, was struck down and killed by a car as he walked along a road close to his farm near Marked Tree.

Mrs. John Cleary, 25, of Hope, died Sunday of injuries suffered Saturday night when her auto crashed into the rear of a truck on highway 67 near Fulton, Ark.

Her three-year-old son was hurt.

Also over the weekend, the bodies of two fishermen who drowned at Lake Norfolk last Friday were recovered. They were C. J. Herwig, 35, of Rock Island, Ill., and C. E. Rathburn, Mountain Home. Their boat capsized while they were running a trolling.

A companion, G. A. Eldred, Rock Island, swam to safety.

Man Runs Amok, Shot to Death

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 8.—P—A former San Diego, Calif., union official was shot to death by a deputy sheriff after he tried to wreck a transcontinental bus and ran amok in a hospital.

Sheriff Bill Decker identified the man as John A. Brooks, 36, former business representative of the Waiters & Bartenders union in San Diego. Decker said the San Diego sheriff told him the union had discharged Brooks because he was erratic and believed both labor bosses and Communists were after him.

Decker said Brooks was shot early yesterday after a fight with Deputy Sheriff Olin Hughes.

He said Brooks tried to run a bus in which he was a passenger into a ditch, jumped out of the vehicle, then later sought aid for a shoulder he said was injured.

Hughes and Deputy A. D. Hamilton took him to Parkland, city county hospital, where X-rays showed he was not injured.

Brooks suddenly shoved aside a nurse and doctor, knocked down a man he met in a hallway and fled the building, Hughes in pursuit.

Mexico's westernmost possession is Guadalupe Island, 180 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif.

The FORMER MISS FREY

By Edwin Ruff Copyright 1950 by NEA Service, Inc.

XXXX

EDE FREY'S eyes searched Jeffrey's face. She wanted both to sympathize with his uncomfortable position and to punish him. Suddenly sympathy got the upper hand. Jeff was weak, but he was her brother. Against a strong, dominant personality like Northcott, he would have little chance.

"Listen, Jeff," she said slowly. "You aren't the family peck. You've just been worked into a corner. You say you can't make up your mind. Well, I'll make it up for you. You're not, Jeff Frey, going to sell one single share of your stock to Lewis Northcott—or to anyone else."

He blinked at her. Then, as if to save face, he took refuge in futile bluster. "That's for me to say, isn't it? After all, I've got a perfect legal right . . ."

"It isn't," cut in Ede, "a question of legal right. It's a case of whether you're going to let us—and Ethel—down. And you're not going to do that, Jeff. I'll fight you every inch of the way. I don't know what Northcott's promised you in his—his proposed new order in the agency. But, whatever it is, it will never come off. There isn't going to be any new order. If worse comes to the worst, I'll throw Northcott and his account out altogether. I mean it, Jeff."

"She's got you, Jeff? Myron said. 'And she's not yet known.' He gave in, then, flinging up both arms in a helpless gesture. "What can I do? You're both solid against me. All right. Yes, yes. They'll raise the bidding, but I guess I can take it."

"They?" Ede said suddenly. "You've been referring to 'they' and 'them' all these. Who's in this with Northcott, Jeff?"

Jeff looked at Myron and Ede and nodded. He turned back to Ede, a reluctant expression on his face. "All right," he said. "Remember you asked for all the plan was that if I sold my shares, they would be bought by Gil Summerfield."

It had come like a terrific blinding blow, stunning her, rendering her practically powerless to think. Even as she rode down to the agency the next morning, Ede still felt numb and shocked. Gil Summerfield? Elegant, smiling, rather indolent Gil, whom she had come to look upon as perhaps her best friend, conniving behind her back?

And yet, knowing how her father had felt and how she felt, Gil had entered into collusion with Lewis Northcott. And for what purpose? Surely not to make money. Gil Summerfield was almost fabulously rich. There were people who could never get enough of money, and power. But Gil Summerfield? She shook her head.

Then, suddenly, she thought again of the week-end just passed, and of Lewis Northcott. It was now clear as crystal that Northcott did not do things without reason. Definitely, he had invited her on the cruise with an ulterior motive in mind. Suspicion swam in her mind. Why had Dan Reagan been invited as well?

The thought seemed to clear Ede's brain, set it to working again. Fully, normally. She arose, went down the corridor to Reagan's door.

He was sitting at his desk, his long shoulders hunched over it. "Dan," she said abruptly, "where were you in Lewis Northcott's plans?"

Reagan started. "I don't know that I follow . . ."

And then he stopped. It was useless to try to pretend, or evade, under the hard bright searchlights of Ede's eyes.

"I see," Ede said coldly, "that you know he had—plans."

He nodded slowly. "Yes, I knew it."

"I suppose," said Ede, "when Northcott took over Frey & Company you were to have the same job, but at a higher salary?"

Reagan's eyes dropped to the desk pad. "You seem to know everything. How did you find out about all this?"

"From Northcott himself. But that's neither here nor there. The point is that you and Jeffrey and Myron all knew that Northcott was trying to get this agency. You all know how my father would have felt about a thing like that and how I feel about it. But not one of you—not even Myron who turned Northcott down cold—had the decency or the loyalty to come to me about it." She laughed, a short hard laugh.

REAGAN drew a breath. "There isn't much I can say for myself," he said, in a low voice. "Except that . . . well, I guess it isn't worth saying."

"Whatever it is," Ede said recklessly, "I'd like to hear it. It might, just possibly, make me feel better."

Reagan braced himself. "I see what you mean and you're absolutely right. The way I feel about—about business and things like that hasn't a single thing to do with the way I feel about you. You know I'm in love with you. God knows I've made that clear enough. But I thought of something else, too. This is kind of hard to say—but you aren't sure how long you want to go on in this business. I thought that . . . well, that if what I hope is going to happen does happen, we—well, we'd be all set. At least, I'd be in a better position than I am."

Ede said gently, "I understand a good deal more than you think I do, Dan. And I don't blame you very much. You'd naturally have a—a different outlook."

Reagan raised troubled blue eyes, said rather awkwardly, "Well, where do we go from here?"

"I know exactly where I'm going from here," Ede said evenly. He managed a smile. "I don't know that I get you, now."

"I don't either, Dan," said Ede and left him to figure it out.
